COMMENTS FROM THE OFFICE OF THE TOWN MANAGER

The Budget Committee completed their recommendations Wednesday night. The total increase over 1971 amounts to 2.5% but it was felt a smaller sum should be appropriated from surplus this year, therefore $30,000 was recommended from that source rather than $35,000 as was done last year. This creates a 6.3% net increase to the taxpayer.

Our appropriations, for local government, in 1971 was $162,115 with the $35,000 deducted from that, this year the recommendations are for $165,331 with $30,000 deducted from surplus. This means we will require from taxation in 1972, $135,331, as compared to $127,115 that was appropriated in 1971.

Negotiations are proceeding for rights-of-way and land acquisitions for the sewage disposal system. We have received authorization for a $40,000 grant from the F.H.A. toward the project. This was the amount that was anticipated when the preliminary plans were made.

DISTRICT 44 DIRECTORS LIMIT NET INCREASE TO 6%

Action by the S. A. D. 44 board of directors on Monday evening will limit the 1972 district share of the proposed school budget to a 6% increase over 1971. District voters will be asked to approve an 18 month budget on Feb. 22. Two-thirds of the district's share will be raised by local taxation in the member towns in 1972. The other third will be assessed in 1973.

Despite the higher net budget to be paid by local taxpayers, the total operational budget will be less than for a comparable period in the preceding year. This is due to a drop in state aid and other estimated income.

GOULD ACADEMY
OUTPLAYS HYDE
Unbeaten Gould outplayed Hyde of Bath who had a 5-2 record. The undefeated Huskies led by Bill Hawk and Charlie Ault, two juniors, maintained a clear lead throughout the game for an easy victory over Hyde School, Jan. 26. Bowden led the Hydes with 13 while Hyde's All-Prep was held to 6, far below his average. The Huskies, unable to get many rebounds in the first half were amused by John Algeit, who crashed the boards in the second half. Gould record now stands at 9-0.

GOULD EASILY OVER M. C. I.
Unbeaten Gould, upped its record to ten wins no losses, with an easy victory over Maine Central Institute on Jan. 29. Jack Milligan and Charlie Ault were high scorers for Gould while Joe Berry led the Hydes. Gould's starting five devasted M. C. I. in the first half as can be seen by a half time score of 41 to 14. M. C. I. gained back some ground in the third, dropping the lead to only 17 points. In the fourth quarter the second string took over and the game ended with Flammability Standards for Children's Sleepwear

Few people realize how easily sleepwear catches fire. Each year, scores of youngsters are badly burned when their pajamas go up in flames.
Doctors, safety officials, and concerned citizens have asked for many years for federal flam-mability regulations for children's sleepwear. Final standards have now been set.
Pajamas, nightgowns, robes,
and other sleepwear in sizes up through 14 will be required to meet the new standard set by the U.S. Department of Commerce as of July 23, 1973.
The standard says that fabrics and garments must not ignite and burn when tested in a vertical position by a brief exposure to flame. Fabrics that melt and drip on contact with flame will also be banned. All sleepwear that is sold in interstate commerce will come under this ruling.
Consumers have been taken for the word and the standard goes into effect beginning in July, 1973, all garments not meeting
this standard must be labeled
"Flammable" Nonflammable sleepwear is available now, but its price is slightly higher than regular garments. For this reason, the safety items have not sold well.

GREENWOOD CITY

Mrs. Colista Morgan, Corres. —
The tree tops were dressed in diamonds and lace as I crossed the pond
and took a rivulet through the trees toward the Sanborn.

A squirrel scampered by and from a cedar woodlot I heard a blue jay cry.
This was my first walk on the Sanborn for the winter. As it wound its way like a forest aisle ahead of me, bright crystal pendants hung along the banks.

The air was crisp and bracing as I headed up stream. My pathway resounded a crunch beneath my snowshoes.
Nowhere, as far as I looked in the distance were there any tracks except the tiny ones of animals.

All along the banks the trees were decked out in the full glory of winter white.
Traveling as far as I usually go in summer I climbed the bank between the two silver birches and continued in the area where a small brook flows in summer time. In one place a dainty pool had caught a few leaves which were tumbling free.
Just peeking from beneath the un-trodden snow were the green mosses.

I was now among the well-defined firs, the dark somber spruces, and the pines lifting evergreen arms to the light.
As I walked through an open space between the trees where a small gully lay hidden, I startled a rabbit which hopped quickly and silently ahead and disappeared. I seldom see one so I was surprised, too.

Resting here the quietness was profound. The ridges dragged across the landscape with little furrows between the winter trees whose boughs were once joyous but now naked and lovely. Yet they stood tall and proudly beautiful against the winter sky with symmetry of form offering inspiration to the passers-by.

I was drawn along through the deep parts of spruce growth toward the crest of the hill. Here I could view the darker blobs on the sced-ges which had been cropped short by the winter's ice.
Walking back now toward the Sanborn I came to its shore just a bit down stream from where I had left it. I continued down toward its mouth, thinking of the ducks quickly conversational as they do in the summer. The little ones hollering to high heavens for mama, as they chatter across the water to the chatter of reeds.

The alders, as thick as usual,
bent with their winter coats, were still along the shore.
An old beech had collapsed bringing down several other trees with it.
My Kingfisher tree had vanished;
probably now under the ice.
Out on the pond I faced the northwest stretching to the forest growth beyond which rose the long humped profile of Overset Mountain.

From time to time the sting of a breeze gave added energy and proclaimed winter's presence.
In the distance, the ledges were coated with ice. The sun painted them at certain angles with a flame of colors. Move, and the green turned to scarlet or to gold. These stalactites were another of winter's fascinations.

The cat-tails were frayed by the wind and bedraggled by the rain as they nodded above the snow. Below them somewhere was another form of life lost in hibernation.
At home icicles formed in the wind, all tilted in the same direction along the cabin roof, while all around the trees looked like fields
of cotton holding up ball-like masses of fluffy snow.

Week end guests of Mr. and Mrs.
Leonard Holt were Mr. and Mrs.
Robert Holt and son of Windsor and Miss Nancy Hutton of Morrill.
The bookmobile was in on Wednesday so we are once again supplied with reading material.

Colista Morgan attended the Delta Kappa Gamma meeting at Norway on Friday.
Callers this week at Mr. and Mrs.
Clyde Morgan's were: Robert Holt,
Mrs. Owen Morgan, Paul and Teresca.

Callers at Norman Millett's were:
Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Lawrence,
Mrs. Sandra Coffin and son, Mason
Noyes, West Paris; Herbert Dunham, Rowe Hill.

Mindanao in the southern section of the Philippines. He was sent by the International Paper Company, where he works. He is teaching the processes of the work done by his company which has a new factory
there. Owen left in January and expects to return sometime in April.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Millett were supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Cotton on Saturday.
Katherine Hakala and family attended a surprise birthday party for her mother at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Mason at Bethel on Friday evening. Earlier Mr. and Mrs.
Richard Ham, Farmington, were supper guests of the Hakalas.

SUPPLEMENT TO ADVERTISER-DEMOCRAT, THE BETHEL CITIZEN, RUMFORD FALLS TIMES, THE WILTON TIMES

The Western Mainer

FEBRUARY 3, 1972

Maine snowmobile laws should be mastered by machine operators

Knowledge of Maine snowmobile laws is essential for snowmobile owners and operators. A folder containing the laws in effect this year is mailed with each snowmobile registration certificate or may be secured by writing the State Park and Recreation Commission, Augusta, Maine 04330.

The laws are designed to protect the rights of all citizens and to provide safe recreation for snowmobile owners.

A brief summary of the snowmobile laws as published in the State Park and Recreation Commission folder are given. If there is any question as to details, operators should consult the detailed pamphlet which was received with registration papers.

Administration and registration functions in Maine are assigned to the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game. The State Park and Recreation Commission is responsible for development of facilities and for informing the public of areas available for use.

For registration purposes, a snowmobile owner is defined as anyone who holds title to a snowmobile or has exclusive right to its use for a period of 30 days. Machines owned by a Maine resident and operated in Maine must be registered in Maine. Snowmobiles owned by non-residents, but used primarily in Maine, must be registered in Maine.

The State Park and Recreation Commission is now allowed to charge a reasonable fee for equipment and services provided in order to finance its programs.

Unregistered snowmobiles may no longer be operated in Maine except on land on which a person lives or maintains a permanent residence.

It is unlawful to operate a snowmobile on any plowed private road in winter after the owner has forbidden such usage, either personally or by posting notice on the road.

Sidewalks are subject to the same regulations applying to highways.

It is unlawful to operate recklessly, under the influence of intoxicating liquor, or impaired by drugs.

Cemeteries and burying grounds are entirely off limits except by a licensed funeral director.

Any law enforcement officer in uniform may require a snowmobile operator to stop for registration certificate inspection, examination of registration numbers, or identifying marks on the machine.

Accident reports must be filed whenever death results or overnight hospitalization due to injuries is required. Property damage of $100 or more must be reported.

Snowmobile operators should study carefully the details in the manual concerning public highways and crossings. Snowmobilers do not have right of way to vehicular traffic and must always yield when crossing is essential.

Railroad tracks are off limits for snowmobiles.

Careful adherence to legal requirements should make snowmobiling a safer winter sport for everyone.

Safety tip

Common sense is the secret to happy, safe snowmobiling.

State parks offer variety of marked trails

Early 100 miles of marked trails are available in twelve State parks for snowmobile enthusiasts, according to the State Park and Recreation Commission. Since the snow has been deep enough for safe operation, the parks having trails for snowmobiles are: Aroostook in Presque Isle; Camden Hills in Camden; Cobscook Bay in Dennysville; Lake St. George in Liberty;

Lila Bay in Greenville; Mt. Blue in Weld; Rangeley Lake in Rangeley; Sebago Lake in Naples; Crescent Beach in Cape Elizabeth; Peaks-Kenny in Dover Foxcroft; Reid in Georgetown; and Popham Beach in Phippsburg.

Trail lengths vary considerably from park to park. Camden Hills features 20 miles of trails while Crescent beach has a one mile trail. Camden Hills offers the road to the summit of Mt. Battie. The Center Hill picnic area is used at Mt. Blue for additional space. A former ski run is open in Aroostook.

Drivers are cautioned to be on the alert for hazards such as picnic tables, guard rails or other partially covered objects essential during summer time use of the state parks.

Snowmobiles are banned from Allagash Lake and Allagash stream but are permitted on frozen water areas established roads and trails in the Allagash Wilderness Waterway.

Maine registrations increase each season

Snowmobile registrations in Maine have increased steadily each year and more than 29,000 machines were registered by the end of January, 1972.

Recent registration figures show more than 52,000 machines legally registered. Estimates are that the number will reach 75,000 or more before the peak of snowmobile enthusiasm.

In 1970-71 about 43,000 were registered. The year before, 29,000 machine owners paid the registration fee.

Fee for registration of each machine is $10. The money collected is credited in the following manner: $3 of each fee is credited to the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game, $1 of each fee is credited to the State Park and Recreation Commission, and $6 of each fee is annually distributed to the municipality of the owner's residence as shown on his registration certificate.

Municipal snowmobile regulation appears doomed at hearing

AUGUSTA — A bill introduced to allow municipalities the right to regulate snowmobiles was defeated in a hearing in Augusta last week and appeared to be defeated if the show of opinion was an indication of the final vote of the measure. A vote showed about 90 snowmobile owners opposing it with three citizens in support.

The bill is sponsored by Richard N. Berry of Cape Elizabeth. It would remove the restriction currently in effect which prevents municipal regulation concerning snowmobiles.

Opponents expressed concern that different regulations in each town would cause considerable confusion and inconvenience to snowmobilers making cross-country trips. The possibility of additional taxes, in addition to the $10 state excise tax, was cited as a further objection to the suggested law.

Beware Frostbite!

Safety officials remind snowmobilers that exposed hands and faces can be frostbitten very easily while using a snowmobile.

At any specific actual thermometer reading, the equivalent temperature drops 65 degrees for every 5 m.p.h. increase in speed. At a specific speed, the equivalent temperature drops 15 degrees for every 10 degree drop in the actual temperature.

What this really means to the snowmobile traveller is illustrated by this example.

At 10 degrees above zero, sitting still, the equivalent temperature is 10 degrees above zero. But moving at 20 m.p.h. at 19 degrees above zero, the equivalent temperature is 25 degrees below zero.

Women make better snowmobile safety record as drivers

Women are safer drivers than men of snowmobiles, yet?

That fact is upheld by statistics assembled by the Maine Fish and Game Department from snowmobile accident records in the 1963-70 season.

Of 67 accidents attributed to adults age 26 to 40 years, men accounted for 50 while women drivers had 17 accidents.

The largest percentage of accidents was attributed to travelling too fast for conditions and operating in unfamiliar area without reasonable caution.

X-RAY PHOTO — Arctic Cat snowmobile, as shown in this composite photo, will have a production version of the Wankel rotary engine for the upcoming season. The Wankel engine — the same simplified gasoline engine currently being developed in multi-million dollar projects by General Motors and Mercedes Benz for use in automobiles — will be available this winter in Arctic Cat snowmobiles throughout New England. The Wankel engine uses no cylinders, rods, valves or lifters.

by General Motors and Mercedes Benz for use in automobiles — is available this winter in Arctic Cat snowmobiles throughout New England.

According to Rod Hughes, president of Rodco, Inc., New England distributor of Arctic Cat snowmobiles, the revolutionary Wankel engine, which is used in some "Panther" models of the new Arctic Cat snowmobile line, is extremely well suited to the hilly terrain and varied snow conditions of New England. "The Wankel engine," Mr. Hughes said, "produces a great amount of torque at low speeds and is especially suited to hilly terrain for that reason.

From a safety standpoint, will also produce superior handling of difficult conditions such as wet or deep snow. The Wankel engine, named after its German inventor, Felix Wankel, uses a rotary motion inside an air chamber to develop power which is directly transmitted to run the vehicle. Compared to conventional snowmobiles, the engine is much quieter, produces a much smoother pull start than conventional twin cylinder snowmobile engines.

A Wankel engine requires no cylinders, rods, valves or lifters. Power developed by the internal rotary motion is vectored directly to the driveshaft of the vehicle. In comparison, the conventional engine must be converted into a rotary motion before it can be applied to move the vehicle. The result is that the production version of the Wankel engine has 23 parts, compared to 100 parts used in a conventional snowmobile engine.

Arctic Cat has experimented with the Wankel rotary engine for more than three years, and a number of its snowmobiles have been distributed for investigation and evaluation.

Human error causes high snowmobile accident rate

It roams the snow country at speeds up to 100 miles an hour carrying its riders on exciting safaris across America's northern landscape.

It's the snowmobile -- fast becoming winter sportsmen's most popular plaything. And one of the most dangerous, too, says the Insurance Information Institute.

Last winter, according to the National Safety Council, more than 500 persons were killed or hurt in snowmobiling mishaps in the U. S.

In Maine, snowmobile accidents killed four persons and injured 13.

Human error -- mainly inexperience, unfamiliarity with machines and terrain, high speed and alcohol -- caused most accidents.

The first of these snow creatures was born about ten years ago. Today more than a million are swarming

America's snow-ways, says the Institute, posing increased threats to life and property.

When left alone, snowmobiles are harmless. But mistreatment caused them to kill 10 persons in the U. S. last winter and seriously injure more than 400 others -- when humans drove them into stumps, cars, water, and other objects.

"Road accidents claimed 42 lives last season," says the Safety Council, "while off-road accidents caused 56 deaths."

Collisions with stationary objects and moving motor vehicles are the leading causes of accidents. Collisions, rough terrain, and falls through thin ice cause more than 80 percent of all snowmobile fatalities.

Snow-covered wire fences -- which looked like snowbanks -- have decapitated persons driving through them. A Minnesota family of five drowned together when their snowmobile plunged through ice on a lake.

Last winter, bad weather turned a Montana snowmobile trip into a nightmare. Seventeen snowmobilers had to abandon their machines when 100-mile-an-hour winds iced the carburetors and caused other malfunctions. During the hike through ten- and twenty-foot snow depths toward the nearest shelter ten miles away, one of the hikers froze to death.

Although snowmobiles are primarily off-the-road machines, about 30 per cent of all accidents occur on highways. Alcohol is often a factor in such mishaps.

"When crossing highways," the Institute reminds snowmobilers, "come to a complete stop and cross at a right angle to the road.

"Engine noise may drown out the sounds of approaching traffic; steep embankments may prevent both you and the oncoming motorist from seeing each other, and your headlight may confuse a passing auto driver and cause a collision."

Even if snowmobilers drive safely, the construction of the machine itself may cause injuries. Since most machines are open and unheated, freezing temperatures and high speed increase the chill factor and can cause frostbite to ears, nose, cheeks, hands, and feet.

Carrying more than one passenger increases the chance of injury to dangling arms and legs.

"Don't tailgate other machines," the Institute advises. "Snowmobile brakes are designed to slow vehicle -- not stop it suddenly."

Accidents would decrease, says the Institute, if snowmobiler would:

- Familiarize himself with snowmobile controls, and state laws regarding registration and licensing both vehicle and driver.

- Buy a snowmobile with enclosed cabin, soft cushion, shock absorbers, front and rear lights, deflector bars;

- Observe local regulations regarding the machine while on and crossing highways.

- Avoid public roads, more than 15 inches thick, unfamiliar or isolated territory more than a distance from known unless accompanied by experienced snowmobilers.

- Carry survival equipment: trips to unsettled areas, as snowshoes or skis, knife, waterproof map, first aid kit, flares, compass, tools, topographical extra fuel, spark plugs rations;

- Inform family or friends of expected departure arrival times, and

- Follow a speed appropriate for terrain and weather conditions.

"All accidents appear to be related to recreational use of snowmobiles," says the Safety Council. As the number of snowmobiles increases, does the number of accidents and insurance claims.

In most states, insurance is available to protect the snowmobiler, as well as suits arising from the death or injury it does to property or persons.

The driving record of the operator; the horsepower and maximum of the vehicle, and its whether for recreation, business, or racing -- all insurance rates.

Snowmobile coverage is normally added to an insurance policy, and can be purchased by homeowners or inland policies. Liability insurance against bodily injury property damage claim be obtained for between $50 and $500 annually, depending on how much coverage desired.

The Insurance is available to cover the bills of the operator passenger involved in accident. Medical coverage of $500 per costs about $10 a Comprehensive fire coverage runs about $2 $100 of insurance, with collision insurance costs about $2.00 per $

"Adequate insurance coverage and precautions are the best to protect yourself and your family from injuries and losses, substitute reminds snowmobilers and potential owners and potential

"Enjoy your snowmobile adventure the Institute. "Change you will if you remember America's snow-ways are hazardous to snowmobilers especially at night -- covered roads and sidewalks are to motorists and pedestrians.

New go-anywhere vehicle offered by Maine dealer

A new high-performance 3-wheel off road vehicle has been introduced by Alsport, Inc., Norwalk, Ohio. Only 34 units high, the Tri-Sport is designed to hug the ground at speeds up to 25 mph. It is available with 5 HP and 12 HP engines. The low pressure tires and light weight make it maneuverable over any type of ground and on grades up to 15 degrees.

can be installed for high speed racing. The Tri-Sport also doubles as a "yard slave" by hitching on a gang mower, lawn rake or utility cart.

The Tri-Sport features a torque converter for automatic response, individual wheel control differential for tight turns, band drum brakes and low pressure tires. For further information, contact Rockwell Dist., Inc., Yarmouth, Maine.

Firepower Ignition Added

A brand new system, Firepower ignition, has been added by Evinrude to several models of its expanded line of snowmobiles for 1971-72. This breakerless capacitor discharge ignition is similar to that used on Evinrude's outboard line. This system is now standard on Evinrude's Trailblazers, its two models of the Bobcat and Norseman. It's the first time Firepower ignition has been used extensively in snowmobiles.

Technically, the system is known as a "magneto excited capacitor discharge ignition." Not only are there no breaker points or belts, but no moving parts to adjust. In addition, no distributor is needed, and the entire ignition system is actually smaller than a package of cigarettes.

Flywheel magnets and stator coils develop current that in turn charges the capacitor. A magnet on the flywheel hub excites a sensor coil that closes two electronic switches. These switches send the current from the capacitor to the individual ignition coils in the proper sequence for firing the spark plugs.

The benefits of such a system are obvious. The Firepower system delivers up to 40,000 volts to the plugs up to 400 times faster than conventional ignition systems. It's also much faster at the firing gap than most competitive snowmobile ignitions.

Because there are no moving parts, there is little wear, and consequently longer life. As for the spark plugs, tests have shown that they may last up to four or five times longer than ones used with conventional ignitions.

Firepower ignition also improves the overall performance of the snowmobile, and is a step forward in providing easier starting.

Bay State snowmobile regulations set limits on machine use, noise

New statewide regulations for snowmobiles in Massachusetts are being enforced this year. Requirements include lowered noise range of snowmobiles, establishment of quiet time periods from late evening to early morning hours, and off-limits zones near homes and designated property.

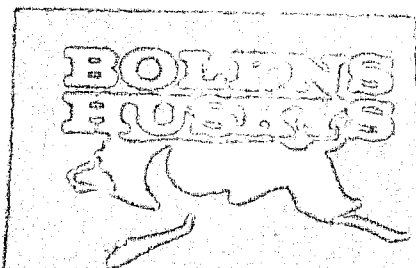

The law passed as a result of mis-use of machines and abuse of others' rights, according to Massachusetts officials. One requirement is that snowmobile operators must obtain definite permission before operating on any private land, unless such operation is lawfully posted by signs.

The most contested portion of the law pertains to the noise decibel level. The Bay State Governor's office wants the level set below the 60 mark by 1974. Manufacturers have complained that this is an example of government attempting to regulate private industry.

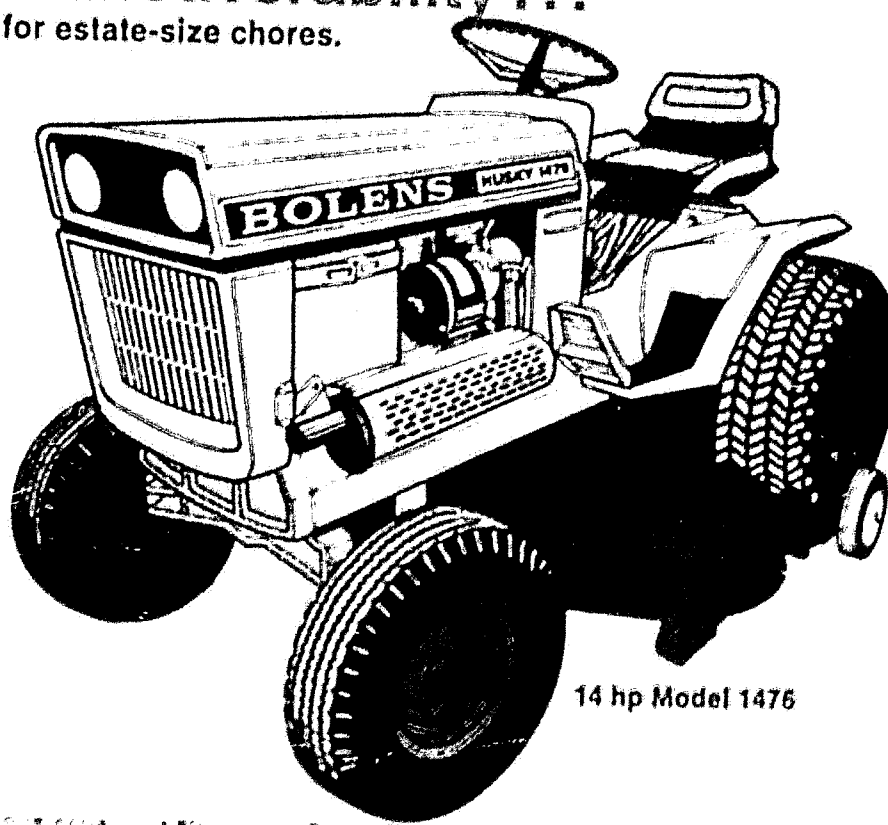

The Massachusetts law will likely serve as a model for other states currently in the process of formulating legal controls that will be acceptable to snowmobile owners, manufacturers, private citizens, conservationists, property owners, and taxpayers.

Costs May Vary

Like many other sports, the costs of snowmobiling may vary, and will depend exclusively on how much you can afford to spend or simply desire to spend. For a well manufactured snowmobile with desirable features on the Evinrude line, for example, costs can range from $900 to $1600 depending on what you want and what you have in mind for your machine.

Clothing costs will also depend on what you want to spend. A top notch outfit with boots, helmet and fashionable insulated suit can cost over $100, but many suits can be bought for less than $50, and some boots for $15.

Trailers are also a necessity, but they still will depend on what kind you want and how you want it signed. If you desire a trailer to carry two or more snowmobiles, for instance, you had better be thinking of spending no less than $250.

The rest of course is to you. Once you have chased your favorite machine, you can spend according to your ability. Remember, though, that it isn't necessary to spend a fortune to have a good time with a snowmobile. That's a special kind of magic that needs no planning.

MSA president warns parents to prohibit snowmobile use by unsupervised children

The Maine Snowmobile Association has announced it is extremely concerned about the number of fatal snowmobile accidents in the state since January 1, 1971.

The President of the MSA, Mr. Pease, stated that of the 3 fatal accidents this season, 3 victims have been 17 years of age or younger. Last year, in December of 1970, 2 of the 3 fatalities involved children.

Pease pointed out that, the snowmobile is not a toy. When improperly used, a snowmobile can be as dangerous as a loaded gun. When properly used, a snowmobile is no more dangerous than a pair of shoes. It all depends on the operator.

The MSA president explained that parents should allow any of their children, regardless of age, to use a snowmobile unsupervised.

He said they are absolutely certain that the operator is not familiar with the machine and has the ability to make the mature judgement to operate safely.

Pease said the leading cause of snowmobile fatalities throughout the country has been collision with automobiles. Last year in Maine there were two deaths of this type. Fortunately, thus far this year there have been none.

Mr. Pease added that, "Operating a snowmobile on a highway is suicidal as well as illegal. When law enforcement officers stop snowmobile operators and give them a summons for breaking the law, their only intent is to keep people from killing themselves or someone else. Any snowmobile operators who are arrested for operating on a plowed road should thank the officer for doing it. He may have saved their lives."

Question check-list on snowmobile safety prepared by Fish & Game Safety Officer

Augusta—Because of a change in the criteria for reporting, the number of snowmobile accidents received at the Department of Inland Fisheries and Game is down somewhat from past years, but those reports received are anything but pleasant reading. Maine Fish and Game Safety Officer John F. Marsh said four persons have succumbed already to the use of snowmobiles with many others sustaining injuries that will be lifelong in their effect.

A 20 year-old Vermont girl's injury is listed as a compression fracture of the spine, a young Calais man sustained a skull fracture, and a middle-aged Aroostook County man sustained a broken back. The list goes on—laceration of face, dislocated shoulder, broken ankle, fractured ribs, abrasions and one middle-aged woman with two broken knees.

"Could any of these injuries have been avoided? Are snowmobiles really that dangerous?" he asked.

Actually the causes of these mishaps remain quite simple. Many officers still list "operation in unfamiliar area without reasonable caution" as a common cause of mishaps, as well as "travelling too fast for conditions." The human element is almost without exception the deciding factor in snowmobile mishaps. In only one case was "mechanical failure" of the machine checked as the primary cause when a brake failure caused the operator to strike a parked auto.

In reading the accident reports it appears that a large percentage of all snowmobile mishaps could be prevented by the operator himself, whether he is experienced or a novice. If you own a machine and haven't had a mishap, stop and ask yourself, Marsh suggested, Is it because you are a cautious driver or have you been just plain lucky? I would venture to say it is the latter in many cases. This being the case, maybe you should reassess your operating habits," he said.

Marsh brought up these questions:

- Do you always check for frozen throttle linkage before you start your machine?
- Are your brakes adjusted properly?
- Do you always allow proper distance for stopping?
- Do you "open 'er up" when you aren't just sure what's ahead?
- Do you take all turns to the right?
- When is the last time you checked to see how thin the ice was before you followed someone's track onto an unknown lake?

When is the last time you operated in violation on a public way?

Do you let your small daughter ride on the machine with a long scarf?

Only you as an operator know the answers to these questions, but statistics will certainly indicate it if you are in the wrong on many of these questions. Then you are destined to become a snowmobile accident statistic. But this isn't necessary. There are cautious drivers who have now operated machines for 10 years without a scratch. The choice is Yours!

Throw Open Your Winter Shutters

Unlock the doors and down the shutters! It's time to open your summer cottage. "What, in the name of winter?" The answer, "yes," thanks to the snowmobile. Once isolated by snows, the summer cottage is now a year-round vacation center. Besides providing easy access to the isolated cabin, the snowmobile can now be used as an all-purpose vehicle. You've reached your destination. Snow cruising, exploring, ski and tobogganing and ice fishing hunting are all fun snowmobile sports, and can be done around the new "summer" cottage.
